Jim Jordan (R-OH) said in an exclusive statement to Breitbart on Thursday that Google’s “bias is not surprising” in the wake of the leaked video that details their determination to thwart Trump’s fascist agenda.

Breitbart News obtained an hour-long video featuring Google executives and its co-founders Larry Page and Sergey Brin, as well as CEO Sundar Pichai and many other executives disparaging Trump voters and plotting to use their vast resources to thwart Trump's populist agenda.

In a leaked video, Brin compared Trump supporters to fascists and nationalists. He then asked his company what Google can do to ensure a higher quality of governance and decision-making."

His reports revealed earlier this week that Google tried to boost voter turnout to help Hillary Clinton during the 2016 presidential election.

Rep. Louie Gohmert, a Texas congressman who hopes to become the next Speaker of the House, told Breitbart News in an exclusive statement, "Facebook censored conservatives in its news feed. Then Twitter blocked conservatives. Now we see that Google attempted to rig the 2016 election in 'key states' with a 'silent donation,' so this is not surprising."
