With a city reputation for alternate lifestyles, two mayors of San Francisco have come clean on mundane conventional romantic adventures. One, a past mayor, only confirmed what was already widely suspected and snickered about. The other, the current mayor, is in hot water over hers.

It is no great epiphany to learn that past San Fran mayor Democrat Willie Brown had an extramarital relationship with present U.S. Senator and past presidential candidate Kamala Harris of California. Brown is thirty years her senior.

“We dated. It was more than twenty years ago,” very recently said Brown. He was married at the time. But the comely Harris apparently did not find that an obstacle to dating.

“Yes, I may have influenced her career by appointing her to two state commissions when I was Assembly speaker,” said Brown, also commenting that he helped other area politicians as well. “The difference is that Harris is the only one who, after I helped her, sent word that I would be indicted if I ‘so much as jaywalked’ while she was D.A. That’s politics for you.”
